Officer Eric Winters:

I, Anna Catudal, am withdrawing all statements to the City of Westerville Division of Police regarding the Report No. 08-0579. I am also dismissing any and all charges against Mr. Bryan E. Hall including but not limited to (1) domestic violence, (2) assault, and (3) unlawful restraint on February 9, 2008.

There had been a misunderstanding between myself and Mr. Bryan E. Hall that I originally exaggerated out of anger and frustration. We discussed something simple about the organization of our kitchen, and our conversation escalated into a heated argument. We were throwing things and pushing each other around. I was very angry with Bryan; I knew that Bryan had several court cases that he was dealing with, and that more police involvement would have him put in jail for several years. I severly exaggerated the police report to have Bryan arrested immediately. Even later that day we had peacefully resolved our disagreement.

I was extremely disappointed with my actions and wanted to correct the matter yesterday. I attempted to explain this to a Westerville Police Officer (I believe Officer Carter) on February 9, 2008 but he informed me that I could not drop / dismiss these charges and stop the Westerville Police from detaining Bryan that day.

I deeply regret the waste of the city's, Bryan's, and my own time and / or resources. I doubt, however, that the situation could not have been resolved on February 9, 2008. Bryan Hall should not have been arrested, and again, I will not pursue any charges against him.

Regards,

Anna Catudal

Mr. Gill:

Mr. Bryan E. Hall has been arrested. We had an argument early this morning.

He went out last night and left his phone at home. The entire time that he was gone, his phone was called by private numbers and sent text messages. I was curious to see why. I listened to his messages and looked at the texts... those all contained explicit messages, even pictures, from different women. Later, he came home around 3:30 am and wanted to sleep with me. I told him no, and we started to argue. I was absolutely infuriated with him, and I called the Westerville Police, hoping they would force him to spend the night anywhere but at home.

When the police arrived, I walked into the kitchen with two police officers, and Bryan stayed in the living room. I told them that Bryan slapped me, pushed me down the stairs and around the house and yanked on my hair. They asked me if I wanted to press charges, and I said no and that I wanted him to be forced to sleep at his parent's or friend's house... that I did not want him to stay at home. The police officers went between the two rooms for maybe fifteen or twenty minutes, and then they came back to ask me again if I wanted to press charges. I repeated my previous answer - I did not want to press charges; I just wanted him to sleep somewhere else. Then they arrested him. I started to cry quietly because I was not angry with Bryan anymore, and the reality of the situation was setting in... I called the police in anger, knowing that no one would believe that Bryan did not strike me.

When Bryan was taken out of the house, the same two officers approached me again and asked me if I wanted to make a written statement. I said no, I will not write or sign anything. They asked again, and I said I did not want to. They pressed further, trying to find out why I did not want to write a statement... I knew the statement would be false because I called the police in anger, not because I really needed to. I started to feel very uneasy, and they kept asking me why I did not want to write or sign anything, then proceeded to give me reasons why I should make a statement. This went on for several minutes; I finally acquiesced and wrote a statement so that they would leave my home.

I plan to write a formal statement on Monday for Bryan's probation officer to let her know that his probation was not violated, since I should have never called the police. There were no pictures of any injuries on me (like the last time we argued and the police were called). In fact, Bryan is the one with the injuries this time.

This is terrible, Mr. Gill. I have created chaos in our family, all because I lost control of my anger. What else can be done to fix this mess?

Sincerely,

Anna Catudal

I, Anna Catudal, attest the following in regards to Case No. 2008 CR B 026797.

I have exaggerated my statement to the Westerville Police out of anger towards Bryan Hall. The events recorded in my emergency call and witness statement on October 25, 2008 did not happen. I found out that Bryan Hall had been promiscuous, sleeping with different women nearly every night for over a month. He had come home around 3:30 am on October 25, 2008 and wanted to sleep with me. I told him absolutely not, we started to argue, and I called the police.
